

Trial delay called threat to courts

By the Associated Press

Washington

Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States, says there is a critical backlog of cases in the federal courts and that delay in bringing cases to trial may allow criminals to run loose.

"Unless we have better management," Chief Justice Warren said, "the future of our judicial system is in danger."

Chief Justice Warren told members of the American Law Institute in a speech that delays caused by court congestion are reaching two years in some criminal cases, and noted that "speedy apprehension and conviction of criminals is one of the surest deterrents to the commission of crime."

Chief Justice Warren said: "There is no single thing the courts could do which would contribute more to the war on crime than to see that defendants are given a speedy trial and appeal."

Noting that the number of appeals filed in the federal court system is up 88 percent above the number filed seven years ago, he said conditions are "ominous for the future."

"Delays in reaching trial, resulting as they do in forgetful and timid witnesses, increase the probability that the defendant though guilty will not be convicted," he said.

Trial delays criticized

Chief Justice Warren added that defendants held in limbo for long periods of time in or out of jail are, if innocent, deprived of life and liberty without cause.

"In many cases, the public is not fully satisfied the man who should be convicted and in jail an opportunity for the commission of new crimes," he said.

Chief Justice Warren also hit at the long delays in civil cases, and while these cases do not represent the life and liberty of the parties, they often represent suffering and financial loss which a humane society should not tolerate.

Chief Justice Warren listed as reasons for the long delays the increased complexity of cases being tried in federal courts, the expanding technology and its impact on court cases, and recently enacted laws providing for bail reform and free lawyers for the poor.

But he also placed some of the blame on lawyers who "delay trials in order to defeat the ends of justice."

Liability of consensus

The Italian elections have produced no major upsets. In effect, they have confirmed in office Premier Aldo Moro's coalition government, based on an alliance of the country's two major right-of-center and left-of-center democratic parties. But what must not be overlooked is that the elections have also pointed to a liability of consensus politics in parliamentary democracies. In a word, the results tend to confirm that the system in a parliamentary democracy works better when the electorate has before it two clear alternatives, when the discontented have an opportunity of casting their vote for a democratic party which stands some likelihood of coming to power and thus being able to do something to alleviate the discontent.

Italy's coalition government—still on balance the best to run the country under present circumstances—represents consensus politics. It brings together Italy's biggest single party, the Christian Democrats, and what had been the biggest non-Communist alternative to the Christian Democrats, the Socialists. Thus it robs the electorate of a choice between the democratic Right and the democratic Left because the one-time contestants have become allies.

In voting at the weekend, the Socialists were the ones who paid the biggest price—in party terms—for being party to consensus government. The votes that they lost went mostly to the Communists, who seem to have inherited some measure of what the Socialists apparently surrendered by deciding to enter the government with the Christian Democrats. Ironically, the presence of the Communists as a valid party within a parliamentary framework may have helped spare Italy some of the more savage wrangles with consensus politics in one form or another have brought to France and threaten West Germany with.

Interestingly in West Germany, the Socialists have of late joined in a coalition as minority member with the Christian Democrats—the same pattern that has persisted in Italy. Every sign indicates that as a consequence the German Socialists, like the Italian Socialists, have lost ground with the electorate.

In France, the setting is different, but there is a parallel in general terms. Ten years of Gaullism have been 10 years of imposed consensus. There has not been intelligent dialogue or meaningful political interplay between the General and the Left. The price is being paid this very week.

None of this means that a particular party ought to be more right-wing or more left-wing. None of this is meant to add to the respectability of Communists. But what it does mean is that healthy conflict and healthy alternatives within a democratic framework are needed to keep democracy alive and well.

Containing the fire

Thus far major student uprisings have shown an ability to attract great numbers for overt marches and seizures of buildings, but the students have failed to gain a consensus in the political sense for orderly negotiation with university or government authorities.

In Paris, a meeting in the Théâtre de France of over two thousand students showed them unable to agree on the issues of their uprising. The New Left students were supposed to represent proved to be a mixture of "Maoists," "anarchists," and "situationists." The latter, as defined by the New York Times, "have no ideology and weigh each proposal as it arises," and reflect the incoherence of the protest elements.

The main splintering issue in Paris and elsewhere is whether the students are prepared for specific reform of their census or for widespread social reforms.

This debate drove a third of the 70 members of the student negotiating body at Columbia University to form their own party. They hope to focus attention on Columbia's renaissance, rather than get drawn into protests with broader political implications.

This restraining move of the moderates is encouraging, though whether they can dominate Columbia's student political situation remains to be seen. New Left elements in the past have been so intent on fomenting crises that they have neglected programmatic action. Reform, it appears, must be left up to the very administrations the young radicals are protesting against.

No one argues reform is not needed. Something is amiss at the Sorbonne when "800 archaeologists are trained while there are jobs for only eight."

But now that the fires of change have been lighted, surely the moderating elements will have some support in their attempts to contain their fire for the illumination of their institutions. And they should not be confused with those who would use their torches for anarchic conflagration, who must be met with wise sternness.

The purpose of problems

President Johnson spoke wise words when he warned that the curing of America's ills depended upon the spirit in which they are approached. Particularly timely was his reminder that no problems are solved if men give way to "despairing despair."

It is important that a nation, like an individual, bear in mind the fact that problems arise for the specific purpose of being solved. In short, such challenges, however big or small, are an opportunity for progress, if seen in this light.

This was never truer than of the United States. Many of its problems (racial tension, rampant crime, pockets of poverty, urban blight, etc.) are major. But, as President Johnson himself said, it is utterly wrong to render a verdict "of fatal sickness in our society." These problems will, he so very rightly said, "be solved by realism, by determination, by commitment, by hope and by self-discipline."

One of the most instructive and thought-provoking passages in the New Testament emphasizes that the chastening effect of problems may be momentarily grievous but that the end result can and should be a great step forward. This applies as much to a people as to an individual.

History is filled with examples of countries which had the courage and wisdom to recognize that the time for a step forward had come, listened to the guidings of their highest concepts and became stronger, happier and better as a result. Who can really doubt that the United States will not do the same thing with the problems which face it?

Problems and crises are not, of themselves, the major danger. The greatest threat is the refusal to face a challenge wisely and calmly and to stand ready to meet it forcefully. In brief, the kernel of any challenge is the mental attitude taken toward it. If such trials are looked upon as proofs of the profound fact that right progress has a more than human inspiration, then it is impossible to give way to discouragement or to consider such challenges beyond one's power to meet.

"Fifi, after all I've said, how could you?"

Hanoi's peace mood

Among the American negotiators at Paris there is strong belief that North Vietnam has a dual strategy: on the battlefield, and in Washington.

One aim is to fracture the government and the Army of South Vietnam, its cohesiveness, its fighting heart. Hence the savage slashes at South Vietnamese cities in the Tet offensive, and the latest heavy attack on Saigon itself. Hence the rumors, spread by the Viet Cong, that Washington will "sell out" the Thieu government.

The other aim is to wear down the American will-to-persevere. In this election year, by inflicting heavy casualties on the American forces, thus appealing to antiwar sentiment.

Hanoi well understands what impact a division of the Saigon government would have on the Paris talks. It equally understands that a wearing-thin of American resolve could result in Washington peace concessions otherwise unattainable.

Months ago, Hanoi's private pronouncements were suggesting that 1968 was to be the war's climactic year. That year now is nearly half over, and victory still eludes the North.

Yet Hanoi's rate of military replacement is running very high, despite American bombing (which smashes an estimated 20-25 percent of the supplies). Hanoi's war effort, reinforced by approximately a billion dollars' worth of Soviet matériel in the last 12 months, has not slackened off.

American negotiators, watching at Paris for any telltale indica of Hanoi's mood, find little one way or the other. Hanoi could be deciding now that the war was going abysmally poorly, and could be preparing for concessions that would permit the development of an independent and durable non-Communist regime in Saigon. Or Hanoi could be determined to fight on, to give not an appreciable inch, and to utilize its reinforced Army in further attempts to smash the Saigon government, the South Vietnamese forces, and American's perseverance.

It is probably too early for Hanoi to have come to final conclusions. The one available fact, so far, is that Ho did agree to peace talks, with some alacrity, when he might well have said "not interested" as he did so often in the past.

French are being French

By Joseph C. Harsch

Washington

Charles de Gaulle may or may not ride out the present storm and stay in office in France to the end of his elected term in 1972. But the French people have made a sharp judgment about him in their 10 years in this span of the proper life span of this particular period of strong government.

Unlike the English community, the French public has prided itself on achieving necessary change by extraparliamentary spasms. They alternated between strong government and weak government.

The French had weak government under the Fourth Republic. It gave them what they wanted at the time. It was necessary relief for them from the German occupation. It was a time of art and recuperation from the war. It was also the time of laying the groundwork for the revolution.

Change by force

But by May of 1958 the French knew that they wanted a change to strong government. There were many things which a weak government could not possibly accomplish.

That was the solution of the Algerian crisis which was dividing France as passionately as the Vietnam war had been dividing the United States.

And only a strong government in France could put through the necessary currency and monetary reforms which were needed to permit economic prosperity to develop properly. The change was caused,

State of the nations

by Joseph C. Harsch

deliberately, by force. First, there were massive street demonstrations. Then there was a threat of assassination to unhappy Prime Minister Pierre Mendès-France, signed after being firmly warned that otherwise he would meet a bullet.

Technically, de Gaulle was brought to power legally. In fact, power was seized in his behalf in a massive conspiracy which engineered a coup d'état.

Todays' pattern

There is only one important difference between the May of 1958 and those of May of 1968. In 1958 there was central planning and leadership. The pro-Gaulist factions intended from long before to bring them to power.

The pattern today is similar except for the planning feature. The students happened to have become restless, for perfectly good reasons. French bureaucracy had failed to keep the educational system synchronized with the times. Students had grievances, as the government hastened to admit once the trouble had started.

But it was accidental that the students demanded change when they did in the beginning of the month of May. So did the pro-Gaulist demonstrations 10 years ago.

In this case there was no sign of original coordination between students and trade unions. The Communists were particularly slow to catch the smell of revolution in the air. The general strikes began spontaneously as people generally became aware of what the students had started.

Probably the best thing of all that it did was to give France 10 years of political stability and continuity. But the price was one-man rule, from the top. It can be called benevolent paternalism or a benevolent despotism. It did unleash the "affluent society." It restored dignity to government and self-respect to the people.

Very French

But it also kept Britain out of the Common Market, dangerously weakened the NATO alliance, and blocked any progress toward a united Western Europe. In many ways it put the clock back.

Probably the best thing of all that it did was to give France 10 years of political stability and continuity. But the price was one-man rule, from the top. It can be called benevolent paternalism or a benevolent despotism. It did unleash the "affluent society." It restored dignity to government and self-respect to the people.

And now clearly, a lot of people in France would like again to have something to say about the policies of their government. It is all natural, and expectable, and very French.

'Valor in Vietnam'

To The Christian Science Monitor:
As one who works with and trains American soldiers, those in their first eight weeks of basic training, I'd like to add to your editorial, "Valor in Vietnam."

The American soldier in Vietnam, despite his youth and the inexperience of his leaders (at jungle warfare) has indeed done all he has been asked to do, and more. He has served in a way which in any other war would bring honor to him. But to me the real marvel of the situation is that our soldier knows so little what the war is about.

Well known terms and characters in our involvement, as Viet Minh, Bernard Fall, Geneva Accords, President Diem, are beyond the ken of the United States soldier. I've interviewed dozens of my trainees, and have asked them what they think of our Vietnam policy and what criticisms they would make of it.

Over and over, the answers I hear are such as these—"Well, I think we should either get it over with fast, or else get out"; "Everybody seems to think it's all right, so I guess it must be"; "If we don't stop the Communists in Vietnam, they'll take over the world"; "I don't know, but I think the hippies should be made to go in the Army like everyone else." Very few know about the war beyond headlines and slogans. I realize I've made some feelings of ours sound like they are typical.

Please let soldiers become better informed when they reach Vietnam, but after talking to many Vietnam returnees, I doubt it.

A train with five cars

To The Christian Science Monitor:
On a recent editorial page there was an article "A train with five cars" by Richard L. Strout.

The table includes data for 1929 which is supposed to show the percentage distribution of total income by five groups, and the totals should total 100 percent. Actually the figures as printed add to 112.5 percent and thus are obviously incorrect.

Also has there been a comparison of distribution after income taxes? This would be a much more valid comparison.

Collegiate computer

By John Gould

Lisbon Falls, Maine

A gentleman was telling me the other day about a college that puts its affairs into a computer machine which it rents from a large grocery company. At the business affair of the year, the gentleman handled by this machine, but even so its capacity is not taxed. They keep wages, taxes, inventories and all such, but there was room over in a spare corner to feed in the collects bills, and they got a modest fee for this service. At the end of the semester grades came out one student got A's and four cases of black pepper.

This, at present, seems to be the total situation with computing machines, and evidently we are doomed to a frustrating future, courting down a long road of mixed up matters about which nobody can do anything. At the slightest criticism, a computer seems to draw in its head like a turtle and sulk.

In connection with this same college, a sheet of paper came out one day and said the English department had no funds for mimeographing the final exams. Since funds for mimeographing the final exams had been allocated, the professor hadn't been mimeographed yet, the professor in charge murmured softly, as professors of English do, but the bookkeeper showed him the sheet of paper and it said there were no funds.

Since an English department without final exams doesn't sound just right some small rearrangement, and a little financial manipulation, it was learned that the English funds had inadvertently been applied to the department of biology, which now had twice as much money for the mimeographing of final exams.

Lovers of the electronic process will be glad to know that for eight years, now, the English department has been set up a contra-account which it was to begin again.

When Uncle Sam sent word that he would like his April 15 contribution in two checks, lest the social security get irrevocably applied to the wrong boondoggle, we were currently having a lot of good, clean fun with a magazine. My son, being junior and thus of no tax value, had two tax-free contributions—one to go to his home and one to mine. Several months passed, and I expect several more will, and it appeared that we had innocently intruded an insoluble problem which, deep in the vitals of the computer, was a bilious and malignant state of affairs. At anything on anybody, we had become convinced that the puzzlement we had generated was well worth the subscription price, and was probably going to be our only return. It was just then that the Internal Revenue Service suggested we should not risk one check, but should remit two.

I sent two. I'm willing to play around with a magazine, and carry my copy over to my son each week until somebody learns how to send him one, too, but I was leery of the consequences of a double tax error. Yet I believe I am constitutionally privileged to wonder about a major governmental agency which does not know how to subtract and is insistent that the consequences of error are the responsibility of the citizens. The ultimatum was most clear: if we didn't send two checks and thus bow submissively to the likelihood of being blamed for it, we would have nobody to blame but ourselves. Uncle Sam, certainly, didn't intend to get involved. He has a fine big machine but he publicly announced that he can't run it yet, and meantime it's every man for himself.

I presume most taxpayers felt about as I did—that you can write patient notes to a gasoline charge-card company for two-three months, and then begin to get nasty, and that in the end you can call quits and tell them to go fly a kite, but that this is hardly the way to treat the United States of America. Yet the difficult situation precisely is that the same electronic gods and the same kind of machine that messes up your magazines can settle you comfortably in the penitentiary because you paid your taxes in one check instead of two. I'm beginning to understand why President Johnson wanted out.

Suppose you were a professor of English, taught and you had a class, and you had to explain to some bright young students how a Dickensian character sat on a high stool in a cage behind a wicket and spent all day cyphering with a quill pen in a big ledger. And then all at once you had to go over to the college office and fight with a computer. Just suppose. And send two checks for sure.

He who doubts from what he sees Will ne'er believe, do what you please. If the Sun and Moon should doubt, They'd immediately go out.

CLARIFICATION

The "OPINION" has made no intentional slanderous snipes at any individual involved in student government. If any person has been unjustly accused of any act constituting poor judgement in execution of duties or otherwise, then apologies are herewith being extended to them, and only them. Correct implications are not being withdrawn.

Criticism had been rendered in rather generous amounts in previous literature distributed on the campus. It has been said that these earlier circulars attempted to force ideas on the students. Well, it should be remembered that it is up to these same students to accept or reject any ideas that are presented to them.

A number of hastily stated charges have been made against some factions at Muir for making attempts to "take over the government"; they are not true.

Criticism and praise has been and will continue to be rendered by the "OPINION", and no doubt against it, also. This is taken for granted. Your views are welcome.

TO WHOM DO THE CENTER BLEACHERS BELONG?

Seniors are currently discontented with the condition of Senior privileges.....which are very apparent because of their absence.

If the center section of the bleachers is designated to Seniors, then WHY isn't there some bit of enforcement of this favor?

What sort of a farce are the 12th graders falling for when they are supposed to be excused first at the end of each gathering yet they wind up swallowed by a mass of Juniors and Sophomores?

The earlier dismissal would seem to give the two lower groups a good chance and a good excuse to be late to class, wouldn't it? ~~bummm~~....

Many Seniors think that the center section affair is stupid, but what else has been offered them? There is no choice involved!

SOLID IN THE SOUL - 12 MARCHES

The shelter program now advocated by strategists for the Defense Department confirms our growing fears that our armed forces can no longer protect the civilian population in the event of war. Now these Defense Department advisers are asking us to protect ourselves by constructing family shelters. But what kind of protection does this really give?

Harrison Brown of Cal Tech estimates that a 10 megaton bomb on Los Angeles would destroy all persons and buildings in a 5 mile radius and create a colossal fire storm which would burn or smother all life in the entire basin.

Herman Kahn of the Rand Corporation and one of the more optimistic planners estimates that even with an effective shelter program 50 million Americans would be killed, millions more would be injured. The main purpose of civil defense strategists is to strengthen the delusion that nuclear war "thinkable".

In the view of some, there is no defense against war except the abolition of war itself. Civil Defense deludes the public and people into believing that peace against modern mass weapons of war is possible. It lulls people into a false sense of security by diverting the public from the understanding that we cannot have both war and survival. It prepared people psychologically for the inevitability of thermo-nuclear or biological warfare in the face of our uneasy realization that civilization can no longer depend on war as a method of obtaining security. Civil Defense is wasteful of human and physical resources.

U.S. Senator Stephen Young of Ohio calls it our "billion dollar boondoggle".

More fundamentally, Civil Defense is destructive of the fundamental moral and religious values that lie at the very heart of our way of life. Our Judeo-Christian tradition teaches us that each man's life is sacred, that all men are brothers under God, and that love, not hate, not fear—is the force that can bind men together in peace. What happens to us when we deny these values and give our moral approval to the mass extermination of others?

Our very survival depends not on Civil Defense, but on peace. It depends not on futile shelter programs inspired by a cynical concern but on solid, workable international agreements to disarm. We ought to be talking about building homes for our people rather than hoodwinking them with foolish promises about underground shelter. We should be considering ways to feed two-thirds of humanity the go to bed hungry every night rather than telling them to store away a two-weeks supply of food in spaces holes in the ground. Instead of wasting millions on a national network of bomb shelters, we should put just a proportion of these dollars into building bridges of friendship with other people. The friendship we shall earn will contribute far more to our safety than shelters to jump into after it is too late.

Let us not cower in dark holes in the ground, but let us stand in the sun, admit ourselves as men, and devote our God-given hearts and minds to finding peaceful solutions to world's problems. It is our only permanent shelter. It is our only true defense.

THE DOLLS - OXFORDS $

that aspect of American society has recently been put under the scrutinizing eye of the sociologists. The American Academy of Religious and Social Science explains in a report entitled "Teen-age Culture" that there is nothing basically wrong with America's youth. They are merely a product of an affluent society. Teenagers have become a huge market with an estimated sales potential of $10 billion a year in cosmetics, clothing and non-conformist fad that is ever increasing. Mass advertising aims at teenagers dressing, smelling, talking alike. The report goes on to explain that this teen-age "leisure class" demands a high degree of conformity upon pain of exclusion.

Besides the fact that the Academy's report will alarm few people, it is nevertheless of great significance to our society. It reflects the basic drive of the business and economy, that is, that personal individuality is undesirable.

The other contradiction of fast-paced seriousness is the proliferation of a "leisure class" supporting the contention that America is a classless society.

Young people are not able to engage in the expensive pastime of status-seeking, and for society has created the Sun, luxury and obscurity. Even the poor cannot escape the far-reaching tentacles of society. Advertising depicts these individuals in big joke and grosses millions of dollars by mimicking the hair-style, coffee houses, other non-conformist traits independently; for all concerned, younger generation of young America substitutes prosperity for prosperity. This is an unavoidable result.

In the bourgeoisie of 19th century Europe, they are cultivating the soil that produces hate, revenge. Nineteenth-century Europe produced the evil

KRLA SUSPENSION DEEMED UNFAIR

The Federal Communication Commission has just recently seen fit to criticize the present programming and past ethics of Pasadena's pride, radio station KRLA.

With its broadcasting studios located in the Huntington-Sheraton, the station has become one of the more listened to frequencies on the Southern California radio dial since its creation in 1959. It is currently being threatened with expulsion from the airways by the F.C.C., hence making chances for approval of a permanent license seem dim.

In this writer's opinion KRLA has been unfairly accused of "hoodwinking" the Commission with its broadcasting slate.

A second charge has insinuated discrepancies in a "Golden Key Contest" held two years ago on the "Perry Allen Show", who was a gimmick man, similar to KFDI's Gary Owens.

Allen long ago gave up his desire for more money and fame and traded for popularity and success. Conrad Martinelli, the current host holds down the purse in a breakfast time slot.

In regard to the station's programming, there seems to be no wider scope, ranging from Christian church broadcasts, to rock'n'roll to community forums, to some jazz, and to "Focus", heard each week night at 11:00 with guests often presenting very controversial topics and ideas. AND how many of us can criticize "Let's Talk", on Sunday nights?

The only remark that 21 year-old evening favorite Jimmy O'Neil could make, because of station policy, was an understandable "No comment".

We hope that before April 16 (the presently scheduled last day for broadcasting), that the "No comment" will change to the tune of "No suspension!" This entire action certainly shows that the F.C.C. has been rather tardy in its area of jurisdiction-----TWO YEARS TARDY!!!

...The one important new change introduced in this constitution is the addition of the Senate to the legislative branch. This Senate includes 7 reps elected from each class; and 3 elected from each class council. This ...provides additional representation, increased opportunity for student leadership, and added strengthening of the bond between student government and the class councils.

Bryant Myers

Editor:

...Under the proposed constitution, 50 people would hold semester A.S.B. offices...nearly 3 times as many as now. ...The substantial increase in offices would encourage candidates who previously did not feel well enough known and would also reduce whatever influence popularity may have in elections. It is hoped that by having candidates running for 50 offices, voters would feel a connection with candidates....

Stephen White

Under this form of government 33 positions will be created, 32 in the Senate. In this group will be found 7 Senators, elected at large from...respective classes; 3 Senators from each Class Council; and a speaker and secretary, elected from the student body. The Senators..from the Councils will be directly responsible to these councils...consequently to the basic classes...Senators will have an enormous amount of influence, for they will be closer to..needs of..students and better able to communicate their desires to the Senate and Cabinet. In this...plan lies..answer to the problem of representation without sacrificing vital efficiency... A student will be able to express his views in the Councils, the Senate and Cabinet.

MENTAL PROJECTION

— You Can “PROJECT” Things Metaphysically Right into Being!

Dear Friend:

Here's news about a revolutionary and potentially earth-shaking PROJECTION mechanism. It's based on a new metaphysical discovery, and is now available in a startling book.

It's true. The famous "20th Century Philosopher," Anthony Norvell, reveals one of the most astounding discoveries ever made: how to use a powerful PROJECTION mechanism to metaphysically transform your thoughts and desires into reality.

Called "MENTAL PROJECTION" this mind mechanism can change your entire life -- from the very first moment you turn it on -- money and power appear metaphysically, as if out of nothing.

The famous Anthony Norvell explains the transmutation techniques you need to work "MENTAL PROJECTION" -- and tells you with complete details:

- * How to tune into the "Music of the Spheres" the wavelength over which all "PROJECTION" takes place.
- * How to "PROJECT" yourself into "The Land of Beginning Again" and wipe out all your past mistakes and failure in a single blow, and start over with a clean slate.
- * How to "PROJECT" yourself through a mirror and come out with such dignity, such regal power no one will dare defy you.
- * How to write a sum of money on a slip of paper and "PROJECT" it into becoming yours.

Now I will give you a clear, scientific demonstration of the natural laws behind "MENTAL PROJECTION."

WHY YOU CAN TRANSMUTE THINGS INTO EXISTENCE!

For over 25 years Anthony Norvell searched the literature of all ages, travelled to corners of all parts of the earth. And throughout it all he looked for just one thing -- the power to turn thought into reality. Nowhere was the answer to be had. But finally he discovered that with a certain technique he could reverse important key laws of nature.

D-680606001 013 AT

He discovered that he could make it just as easy to create matter, as it usually is to destroy it. It's easy to start out with something -- say a $100 bill -- put a match to it and end up with nothing. Now he found out, you can start out with nothing, AND END UP WITH SOMETHING.

He could hardly contain his excitement. He tried it once. It worked. He began telling others about it. It worked for them. He called it "MENTAL PROJECTION" and tried it on thousands of people no different from you.

USED BY THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE

- xx Jane Addams was given 6 months to live because she was chronically wasting away. But by giving away a certain part of herself, she was able to "PROJECT" herself practically a whole new body. She lived to bury four of her doctors.
- xx A woman was 76. She never had a trade or profession but always longed for one. She used The "Invisible Law of Mental Vibration" to "PROJECT" herself a talent. She became a great painter and made $1 million before she died at over 100.
- xx A young man was caught in a fire. His legs were just about burned away. Doctors feared he would die. He managed to pull through, but without hope of walking again. Yet by contacting the "Cosmic Mind" he was able to "PROJECT" himself a "new" set of legs. A few years later, in the world famous Madison Square Garden, he ran the world's fastest indoor mile.
- xx A man and his wife had little money. But they had their hearts set on owning their own home. They used the technique of "Centro-Dynamics" to "PROJECT" not just any old home, but their dream house. And they got it for what little money they had.
- xx A certain group of people had no future before them. No money. No contacts. No influence. Yet they wanted to be famous. They used "The Magic Circle" technique to "PROJECT" a great talent into their lives. Later, they all became famous movie stars. You'll recognize their names immediately.
- xx A man had no money all his younger life. His father died at a young age. His mother scraped along by selling biscuits to men for lunch. Then he used the Law of Capillary Action to "PROJECT" great wealth into his life. Before he knew it the biscuit business just grew and grew. He became a multi-millionaire.

Yes, "MENTAL PROJECTION" works. All you need do is use the specific techniques, for the specific things you want.

IT WORKS LIKE THIS!

THE FABULOUS CAREER OF ANTHONY NORVELL

For twenty-five years, a bronze plaque on the doors of New York's world-famous Carnegie Hall has commemorated the teachings of Anthony Norvell, one of the great minds of our time.

Over the years, tens of thousands have come to absorb his deep and profound wisdom — a complete and practical system of self-mastery and spiritual power that combines the Science of the West with the Mystic Knowledge of the East.

Norvell's deep thirst for spiritual fulfillment has taken him on travels to the most remote corners of the earth. He spent many years in India, where he studied with a noted guru (Holy Master). In North India, he later met a Tibetan monk from the Great Monastery at Lhasa, who revealed centuries-old secrets to him — the most sacred mysteries of the Orient, revealed in this book.

space. You start with nothing, and by simply reversing the appropriate natural law, you end up with something -- exactly what you want.

For example, you'll see how to use the following techniques to "PROJECT" meta-physically what you want:

1. How to "PROJECT" a much longer life for yourself -- 100 and over is not impossible -- by increasing your own personal charge of "magnetism."
2. How to "PROJECT" firmer lips, cheeks, smoother skin and a younger look, in general, through the technique "magnetic tensing."
3. How to "PROJECT" contact with the "Higher Mind" and get explicit advice on any problem having to do with family, neighbors, friends or bosses.
4. How to "PROJECT" and shape your future in the areas of finance and prosperity with the "Law of Predominant Impression."
5. How to "PROJECT" yourself a "Hypnotic Eye" which can wither and take over any opponent who dares look at it.
6. How to "PROJECT" an Invisible Golden Line of Power which can be placed in another person's mind.
7. How to "PROJECT" messages through brain contact alone. The other person will never know where the message came from. But will think it's his own idea.

Yes, you'll discover all this and more in Anthony Norvell's epoch-making book. You'll see how it all works by reversing many of the traditional laws of nature. Things that were once impossible are now possible.
